

Resilience and Human Dignity:

Exploring the Principle of Subsidiarity in Social Issues

「レジリエンスと人間の尊厳：補完性原理の探究を見据えて」

Since its inception in 1980, Nanzan University Institute for Social Ethics has consistently gotten to grips with various ethical issues in modern society through an interdisciplinary approach, while pursuing numerous joint research projects to elucidate the reality of "human dignity". As we celebrate the 40th anniversary of the Institute this year, a symposium is held to reflect the various ways by which "human dignity" can be respected in a resilient society. While looking into different opinions through an in-depth discussion about Australia's resource management and suicide measures in comparison with those of Japan, we aim to verify the so-called "Seigel hypothesis" that the subsidiarity principle provides a social ethical basis for resilience.

南山大学社会倫理研究所は、1980年の設立以来一貫して、現代社会における様々な倫理問題に学際的なアプローチで取り組み、「人間の尊厳」の内実の解明を目指して数々の共同研究を積み重ねてきました。設立40周年記念を迎えた今、レジリエントな社会で「人間の尊厳」が尊重されるあり方を様々な事例の検討を通して考察するシンポジウムを開催します。様々な点で日本と対照的なオーストラリアの資源管理や自殺対策に関する知見に触れながら、参加者の皆さんとの討議を通じて、「レジリエンスの社会倫理的基盤を補完性原理が与える」という「シーゲル仮説」の検証も試みます。

Speakers

Prof Allan Dale

Allan Dale is a Professor of Tropical Regional Development at The Cairns Institute, James Cook University. He has a strong interest in integrated societal governance, with a particular focus across the tropical world, northern Australia and the Great Barrier Reef. Allan has both extensive research and policy expertise in building strong societal governance systems, but particularly regarding regional, rural and social development and natural resource management. Allan has been the past Chair of RDA FNQ&TS, CEO of Terrain NRM and before that was responsible for natural resource policy and social impact assessment in Queensland. He is also now the Chief Scientist for the Collaborative Research Centre for Developing Northern Australia and an Honorary Professorial Research Fellow with Charles Darwin University's Northern Institute.

Dr Kazuki Kagohashi

Kazuki Kagohashi is an Associate Research Fellow of the Institute for Social Ethics and an Associate Professor of the Department of Global Liberal Studies, Nanzan University. He has been focusing his research on exploring structural foundations for the realization of sustainable development from the perspective of environmental economics and sustainability theory. His research raises questions about the sorts of environment and resources that are indispensable for maintaining the level of human well-being in the long run and tries to answer it on the basis of the concept of Critical Natural Capital. His current research project, "Social Resilience," investigates the determinants for social resilience by looking at some of the concrete cases of the local communities that have confronted environmental/resource crises, such as land degradation, deforestation, droughts, etc. Through these investigations, this project examines the conditions that can clarify the way of augmenting communities' social well-being in order to create a sustainable and autonomous society.

Dr Kairi Kõlves

Kairi Kõlves is an Associate Professor at the Australian Institute for Suicide Research and Prevention, and Co-director of the WHO Collaborating Centre for Research and Training in Suicide Prevention, School of Applied Psychology, Griffith University. She is also the Course Convenor of Masters Courses. She has been working in suicide research and prevention since 1998. Prior to joining the AISRAP team in 2008, she worked at the Estonian-Swedish Mental Health and Suicidology Institute. Dr Kõlves has been involved in several Australian, Estonian and international projects and has published over 100 peer-reviewed papers, numerous reports and book chapters on suicide research and prevention. She is a member of different advisory committees. In 2010 she was the recipient of the Australian LIFE Award in Emerging Researcher category, in 2017 the Griffith Health Pro Vice Chancellor's Research Excellence Award (Mid-Career Researcher) and the Publication Award of the Menzies Health Institute Queensland.

Dr Karin Moriyama

Karin Moriyama is a Senior Research Fellow of the Institute for Social Ethics and an Associate Professor of the Department of Law, Nanzan University. Her research has been focusing on suicide prevention from the viewpoint of political science. The aim of her research is to provide recommendation for policy makers in formulating concrete policy and to create an effective network among multiple stakeholders in order to prevent suicide and to support the bereaved. Her current research project, "Care for Life," has become a common project of the Institute since 2015. Focusing on suicide as one of the serious problems in Japan, this project tries to raise awareness among general public and policy-makers (government) about suicide as a serious life issue and to find out concrete precautionary approach to avoid it and to support bereaved families through care for life networks and governmental policy measures.
